Republican White Ticket.

For Congress.

Col. B. M. Harrington, of Cabarrus.

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

This beautiful and eloquent address, has been forth to the world as another monument of the patriotism and love of country, which have ever characterized the course of the illustrious individual and Statesman, who now fills the highest office upon earth.

In this document, stands fair and unimpaired, the pure republican doctrine laid down in the Constitution, and enforced by its immortal framers. With the spear of "Ithuriel," he has pierced the corruption and sophistry thrown around the Constitution, and leaves it without a blot.

The "Virginia and Kentucky" Resolutions, of '98 and '99, find in President Harrison, an able and efficient advocate. Now we cannot see how any Southern State Right Republican, can refuse his support to his administration; as the President, in this address has sanctioned every principle, which enters into the political creed of that party. The candid and forcible exposition, of his views and principles upon the exciting subject of the abolition of slavery, in the District of Columbia, or the States, will we trust, forever silence the tongue of slander upon this subject; the decisive stand which he has taken against that fatalistic fiction, should endure him to every man who loves the welfare of his country, more than the aggrandizement of party.

With regard to the "Sub-Treasury" scheme he says, "It is not the device which is complained of, but the unqualified union of the Treasury with the Executive Department, which has created such extensive alarm." In vivid colors he describes the danger to republican institutions, from the concentration of power in the hands of one of the Departments of our Government. "Limited as are the powers granted by the people, yet enough has been granted to constitute a despotism, if united in any one of the Departments of our Government." The force of this remark of the President, all may appreciate, who have examined the ancient Grecian and Roman Republics, and the causes which ultimately proved their ruin.

On the subject of the Currency he is explicit:

"Connected with this subject is the character of the currency. The idea of making it exclusively metallic, however well intended, appears to me to be fraught with more fatal consequences than any other scheme; having no relation to the personal rights of the citizen, that has ever been devised. If any single scheme could produce the effect of arresting, at once, that mutation of condition by which thousands of our most indigent fellow-citizens, by their industry and enterprise, are raised to the possession of wealth, that is the one. If there is one measure better calculated than another to produce that state of things so much deprecated by all true republicans, by which the rich are daily adding to their hoards, and the poor sinking deeper into penury, it is an exclusive metallic currency. Or, if there is a process by which the character of the country for generosity and nobleness of feeling may be destroyed by the great increase and necessary toleration of usury, it is an exclusive metallic currency."

Altogether, we view it as the most perfect address ever delivered by any President to the American people. Long may the principles contained in it, be regarded, and when Europe's kingdoms shall have crumbled into decay, our land will be prosperous, and happy, and the abode of the free and the brave.

MECKLENBURG JEFFERSONIAN.

Last week in the haste consequent upon the publication of the President's Inaugural Address, we neglected to notice the publication of this periodical. After much unexpected delay, Mr. Hampton has unfurled his sails to the popular breeze, and sails from the generous public, a share of patronage and support. We tender the of amity, and wish him success in his vocation; though we cannot but regret the position he has taken in support of a wrong cause.

One of the last acts of the late Locofoco majority in the Senate of the United States, was the election of the notorious Blair and Rivers, as printers for the new Whig Senate. The Whig Senators protested at the time, against the election, but the majority were deaf to every appeal, and with the determination of figures, thrust these blood-suckers upon the Senate.

Since that body has assembled, we see that a resolution has been introduced to dismiss them. The Locofocoes have been in various exhibitions of rage, while the majority with which they are contending, have been attempting to force upon the new Senate, in the capacity of public printers, two of the most obnoxious individuals that could have been selected—like serpents they have grown fat upon treasury mists. Not the age of locofoco domination and misrule is past, and that party have the melancholy task of beholding the wreck of their power and fondest hopes.

THE ELEVENTH IS COMING.

From various parts of the District, we have received the most cheering accounts of the increasing popularity of Col. Harrington. In Lincoln, we are informed that a split has taken place in the ranks of the lococo; and several persons of character and influence, have thrown off the trammels of party dictation, and are now determined to stand by their country and Col. Harrington in the last. If the impression made by this gentleman be continued, the locofoco candidate will be more than distanced notwithstanding the start he has ahead.

NINTH DISTRICT.

We learn from the Greensborough Patriot, that the Whigs of this district, have called a meeting of the citizens for the purpose of nominating a proper person, as candidate for Congress. We are informed by a gentleman from Greensboro, that the Hon. Mr. Hill, (lococo), declines being a candidate for re-election. The late expression of popular opinion, is proving quite unfavorable to the extreme sensibilities of the lococo.

The Hon. Lewis Williams, is again a candidate for re-election to Congress from the 12th District. This veteran in the Whig service, has for nearly thirty years, represented their interest and will in Congress. A more consistent and devoted friend to his country never breathed the breath of life. When the mania of Jacksonism swept over the land, he boldly stemmed the tide and successfully rolled back the billows, which threatened destruction to all who dared oppose it.

The Editor of the Western Carolinian officially announces in his last paper, that his daddy declines being a candidate for re-election to the next Congress. Oh daddy! daddy! daddy! the twelfth of last November kill you!

Last Sabbath morning, our heavy heart was cheered by the sweet and mellow notes of the swallow—that beautiful harbinger of Spring, fresh from the sunny climes of the South. Gaily he flew over us, chattering his well known tones—circle after circle he lightly described in rapid succession, and at last, like a spot disappeared in the West. Long after he became invisible, the musical tones of that dark plumed bird, were wafted to our ears on the genial breeze, that softly glided by on like the fond sigh of one beloved. Hope entered our breast, and again happiness seemed before us.

GEOLOGY NO. 1.

The study of the structure of the Earth, and the changes it has successively undergone, affords the inquisitive mind an unlimited field for the exercise of its powers. Those who are fond of observing nature in her changing and ever varying operations, may look upon the present mineral arrangement of the Globe, and discover innumerable and indisputable evidences of series of changes, effected by her agency.

When, in the midst of solid rock, we find the fossil remains of trees, plants, and animals, the conclusion is irresistible, that the rock has been formed since the trees, plants, and animals existed; but when rocks of this character enter into the structure of mountains, whose towering peaks pierce the skies; we behold grand and sublime monuments of nature's changing power: wisely bestowed by the Creator. At first we see the tree, under her vivifying influence, expanding its branches to the light breeze of summer; but soon we behold it torn up, and swept away by the rapid stream, and hurried far beneath the waters of the Ocean; where in an envelope of mud, it lies until nature assumes its in rock. By subterranean forces these rocks are upheaved, and after the lapse of successive elevations, form part of the mountains we have beheld.

In every quarter of the Globe, immense seams, or beds of coal lie embedded deep in the earth, and under vast masses of solid rock. The vegetable origin of this mineral, is admitted by all who have a practical acquaintance with coal mines—frequently in the places where it is wrought, imperfectly changed woody matter is found, amidst the coal, called lignite; also the impression of leaves, and other vegetable products are obtained, associated with the remains of insects, marine and terrestrial animals, &c. When we find such remains of vegetation, and animals, the conclusion is irresistible, that the rock has been formed since the trees, plants, and animals existed; but when rocks of this character enter into the structure of mountains, whose towering peaks pierce the skies; we behold grand and sublime monuments of nature's changing power: wisely bestowed by the Creator. At first we see the tree, under her vivifying influence, expanding its branches to the light breeze of summer; but soon we behold it torn up, and swept away by the rapid stream, and hurried far beneath the waters of the Ocean; where in an envelope of mud, it lies until nature assumes its in rock. By subterranean forces these rocks are upheaved, and after the lapse of successive elevations, form part of the mountains we have beheld.

A GOOD JOKE.

The Locofoco members of the Missouri Legislature, at a meeting held on the 1st ultimo, adopted a series of Resolutions, expressing unabashed confidence in Mr. Van Buren, and earnestly recommending him to "the party" throughout the Union, and to the General Convention, should one assemble, as a candidate for the Presidential term which will commence on the 4th of March, 1845.—

A DRY SPEECH AND A NAP.

A few days since, when the General Appropriation bill was up in the House of Representatives, and the debate was, as usual, long and dry, Mr. Dromgool, of Virginia, indulged himself with a snooze; and suddenly waking up, while the Clerk was reading an old document containing a decision of a former Speaker, Mr. D. rose, and said he appealed from the decision, supposing it to be a decision of the present Chairman. This caused much laughter, after which Mr. Dromgool had an opportunity of continuing his nap.

A most disastrous conflagration took place in Washington, Georgia, on the night of the 24th ult. The total number of buildings destroyed was fifty-five.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE PRESIDENT.

Daniel Webster, of Massachusetts, to be Secretary of State.

Thomas B. King, of Ohio, to be Secretary of the Treasury.

John Bell, of Tennessee, to be Secretary of War.

George E. Badger, of North Carolina, to be Secretary of the Navy.

John J. Crittenden, of Kentucky, to be Attorney General.

Francis Granger, of New York, to be Postmaster General.

EXTRA SESSION.

The Raleigh Register says:—"Gentlemen who have been to Washington, state it as a settled matter, that Congress is to be speedily convened—probably in May."

The Fayetteville Observer has the following:—"We learn from Mr. Deberry, who returned on Monday morning, that it was well understood that an Extra Session of Congress will take place, probably in May next. The Governor of this State has authority to order a special election, as soon as he shall have been officially advised of the necessity. (See Revised Statutes, page 390.) It is not incumbent on the Whigs of the several counties of this District to take immediate measures for holding their usual Convention to nominate a Candidate."

DEATH OF MR. MENEFFEE.

We sympathize most sincerely with the deep regret which has been excited among the members of Congress, and his numerous friends in this city, by the death of the Hon. Richard H. Menefee, formerly a Representative from the 11th District of Kentucky. He died at Lexington on Saturday, Feb. 20th.

Mr. Menefee entered Congress at the Extra Session of 1837, and at once distinguished himself by his genius, intelligence, and debating power; while his amiable and generous disposition, and high-principled and chivalric character, gained him the personal regard and attachment of the best men of all parties. No young man, within our recollection, has ever entered public life giving better promise of a brilliant and illustrious career. His early death is a great loss to his State, and to the whole country.—Madisonian.

Mr. Benton called an immense audience, who unconsciously indulged in applause during a burst of eloquence from Mr. Preston, blackboards. "Clear the blackboards from the galleries!" was his expression, which has given rise to the following couplet:

Clear out blackboards! If they do,
Friend Thomas, what becomes of you?

A Diligent Representative.

Mr. Casey, of Illinois, is said to surpass even John Q. Adams in the punctual and diligent discharge of his duties in the House. He has been a member 8 years; has never been absent but a day and a half, and has voted on every question, with the exception of those coming up in his short absence. Every day and every hour found him present, sometimes sitting 28, 30, and even 32 hours at a time.—Greensboro Patriot.

"DEMOCRATIC" LEGACY.

General Jackson said, on retiring from office that he left this great people prosperous and happy. It is not our purpose now to inquire whether this declaration was true or not. One thing is certain, and it is that we wish to call public attention, the old hero left a surplus in the treasury of forty millions of dollars. This is some evidence, at least, that the Government was well provided for. Now mark another fact, and behold the contrast! Mr. Van Buren, who came into power promising to "follow in his footsteps," leaves this "great people" suffering under one of the greatest pecuniary pressures that ever afflicted this or any other country, the treasury bankrupt, and liabilities unpaid amounting to a national debt of forty millions of dollars! This is the precious legacy which is left to us, the people, by the high priest of a bastard democracy. Has he not followed in the "footsteps" with a vengeance!—Raleigh Star.

MANY WHIGS.

We are informed that the Whigs of Stokes are about to hold a county meeting of delegates from each captain's district; a plan which is also commended to the notice of our political brethren of Rockingham and Caswell. If, as now appears probable, an extra Session of Congress shall be called to meet in May next, the time designated for the meeting of the District Convention, (the week of Rockingham Superior Court,) will be none too early.—Greensborough Patriot.

HON. H. A. WISE.

The Van Buren papers have recently been praising Mr. Wise very much, because in a recent debate they thought he evinced a disposition to part company with his Whig brethren. In other words, he chose to differ on some important points with the great mass of the Whig party—an independence, which those who wear the collar, know not how rightly to estimate. How far they have cause for any gratulation in the matter, may be inferred from the following passage:—Raleigh Reg.

"Once for all, I pronounce the charge that I am not a sincere and devoted friend of the coming Administration, no matter whether it be made by a Locofoco, from motives of policy to drive me into his own minority for vengeance sake, or as a result of the past, or by a malicious Whig hypocrite, to destroy an influence, much or little, in the way of his own prement in future, a base and unfounded slander."
